

Silk Flower Spring Wreath

Fire up your hot glue gun, grab yourself a wreath form and a bunch of silk blossoms and craft yourself to spring galore. This adorable faux flower wreath brings instant spring flair to your home and lasts season after season. You can use the blossom wreath to brighten up your front door, use it as a table topper, or give it to a friend.

Instructions

1) Prep the silk flowers

If your silk flowers and leaves are still attached to a branch, plug or cut them carefully off. You can place the blossoms loosely around your wreath form to estimate how many flowers you'll need to cover the entire wreath.

2) Attach the leaves

Add a small dot of hot glue to a bottom of a leaf and stick it to the wreath form. Put some leaves on the top, and other leaves on the sides between the willow twigs.

3) Apply the flowers

Apply a small amount of glue to the back of a flower and press it onto the wreath form. Cover the top and sides of the wreath with blossoms. If you use different flowers, make sure to mix them often. Creating small groupings of the same flower can also look cute. Once you're done, check the wreath form all sides and fill any gaps with additional blossoms.

4) Hang the wreath

Wrap a piece of ribbon or string around the wreath to hang it.

Tip

Wrap the wreath in bubble wrap and store in a dry place away from sunlight once you are done displaying it. This way, your creation stays clean and pretty for future use. Gently go over the flowers with a microfiber cleaning cloth to remove lint and dust.

Materials

grey willow wreath or foam wreath form silk blossoms and a few leaves

hot glue sticks

ribbon for hanging

Tools

low-temp hot glue gun

craft scissors